Research and Original Creative Work

Publications

Refereed Journal Articles

- Otte, S., & Tillman, K. H. (submitted). Parent and Adolescent Attitudes about Sex: The Importance of Inter-generational Closure for Adolescent Behavior. Journal of Adolescent Health. Manuscript submitted for publication.

This study examines the relationship between parents' and adolescents' attitudes about Sex and the likelihood that adolescents will transition to first intercourse. Ms. Otte is a current Ph.D. candidate.

Tillman, K. H., & Miller, B. (submitted). The Role of Family Relationships in the Psychological Wellbeing of Interracially Dating Adolescents. Social Science Research. Manuscript submitted for publication, 32 pages.

Under Revise and Resubmit. This article examines the role of family relationships in explaining psychological wellbeing differentials (depressive and anxiety-related symptoms) between adolescents who date interracially and adolescents who date same-race partners. At the time the study was begun, Dr. Byron Miller was a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University. He is now an Assistant Professor of Sociology at Miami University at Hamilton (Ohio).

Nowakowski, A. C. H., Knop, B. M.<sup>(d)</sup>, Tillman, K. H., Pinto, J. R., Diaz, J. I., Carretta, H. J., Sutin, A. R., & Blackmon, J. A. (in press). Exploring Heart Health in Teens with Asthma: Reflections and Recommendations. Frontiers in Pulmonary Medicine, 1-12 pages.

This article reflects on lessons learned from exploratory research on the links between childhood asthma diagnosis and treatment, social/familial environment, and later heart health outcomes. Dr. Alexandra Nowakowski, Dr. José Pinto, Dr. José Diaz, Dr. Henry Carretta, Dr. Angelina Sutin, and Dr. John Blackmon are colleagues in the College of Medicine at Florida State University. Mr. Brian Knop is currently a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University.

Holway, G. V.<sup>(d)</sup>, & Tillman, K. H. (in press). Timing of Sexual Initiation and Relationship Satisfaction in Young Adult Marital and Cohabiting Unions. Journal of Family Issues, 1-32 pages.

DOI: 10.1177/0192513X15613826 (Online November 2015) This research examines the association between timing of sexual initiation, particularly oral sex initiation, and marital and cohabiting relationship satisfaction among young adults. At the time the study was begun, Dr. Giuseppina Valle Holway was a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University. She is currently an Assistant Professor of Demography at the University of Texas at San Antonio.

Holway, G. V.<sup>(d)</sup>, Tillman, K. H., & Brewster, K. L. (in press). Binge Drinking in Young Adulthood: The Influence of Age at First Intercourse and Rate of Sex Partner Accumulation. Archives of Sexual Behavior, 1-13 pages.

DOI: 10.1007/s10508-015-0597-y (Online Sept. 2015) This paper examines the association between age at first intercourse and subsequent frequency of binge drinking during young adulthood, and explores whether this relationship is mediated or moderated by number of sexual partners or by the rate at which individuals accumulate sex partners during the transition to adulthood. At the time the study was begun, Dr. Giuseppina Valle Holway was a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University. She is currently an Assistant Professor of Demography at the University of Texas at San Antonio. Dr. Karin L. Brewster is a colleague in Sociology at Florida State University.

Brewster, K. L., Tillman, K. H., & Jokinen-Gordon, H.<sup>(d)</sup> (2014). Demographic Characteristics of Lesbian Parents in the United States. Population Research and Policy Review, 33(4), 503-526.

This research uses individual-level, nationally representative survey data to provide a demographic description of lesbian parents in the United States, and to examine the most common pathways to parenthood followed by those who currently identify as lesbian. Dr. Karin L. Brewster is a colleague in Sociology at Florida State University. At the time the study was accepted for publication, Dr. Hanna Jokinen-Gordon was a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University. She is currently a Senior Research Analyst at the Arkansas Center for Health Improvement.

Valle, G.<sup>(d)</sup>, & Tillman, K. H. (2014). Childhood Family Structure and Romantic Relationships during the Transition to Adulthood. Journal of Family Issues, 35(1), 97-124.

This paper examines whether childhood family structure experiences influence the development of romantic relationships during adolescence and whether adolescent relationships, in turn, help to shape long-term relationship trajectories. At the time the study was accepted for publication, Dr. Guisseppina Valle was a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University. She is now an Assistant Professor of Demography at the University of Texas at San Antonio.

Brewster, K. L., & Tillman, K. H. (2012). Sexual Orientation and Substance Use among Adolescents and Young Adults. American Journal of Public Health, 102(6), 1168-1176.

This paper examines interrelationships among the three dimensions of sexual orientation—self-identity, sexual attraction, and sexual experience—and their associations with substance use among adolescents and young adults. Dr. Karin L. Brewster is a colleague in Sociology at Florida State University.

Boyd, E. M.<sup>(d)</sup>, Reynolds, J. R., Tillman, K. H., & Martin, P. Y. (2011). Adolescent Girls' Race/Ethnic Status, Identities, and Drive for Thinness. Social Science Research, 40(2), 667-684.

This article explores how girls' race/ethnic group status affects their body weight, perceptions of overweight, and engagement in various weight control practices. At the time the study was begun, Dr. Emily Boyd was a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University. She is now an Associate Professor of Sociology at Minnesota State University. Dr. John Reynolds and Dr. Patricia Martin (Professor Emerita) are colleagues in Sociology at Florida State University.

McCabe, J., Brewster, K. L., & Tillman, K. H. (2011). Patterns and Correlates of Same-Sex Sexual Activity among U.S. Teenagers and Young Adults. Perspectives on Sexual and Reproductive Health, 43(3), 139-212.

This article examines the prevalence and correlates of same-sex sexual activity among teenagers and young adults in the U.S., paying particular attention to those who do not identify themselves as gay, lesbian or bisexual. At the time of publication, Dr. Janice McCabe was a junior colleague at Florida State University. She is now on faculty at Dartmouth College. Dr. Karin L. Brewster is a colleague in Sociology at Florida State University.

Randolph, K., Russell, D.<sup>(d)</sup>, Tillman, K. H., & Fincham, F. (2010). Protective Influences on the Negative Consequences of Drinking among Youth. Youth & Society, 41(4), 546-568.

This article examines protective factors from three domains of adolescents' lives (individual, familial, and extra-familial) and their effects on the likelihood that youth who drink alcohol will experience negative consequences as a result of their drinking behavior. Dr. Karen Randolph (Social Work) and Dr. Frank Fincham (Family & Child Sciences) are colleagues at Florida State University. At the time the study was begun, Dr. David Russell was a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University. He is currently a Senior Evaluation Scientist in the Center for Home Care Policy and Research at the Visiting Nurse Service of New York.

Guo, G., & Tillman, K. H. (2009). Trajectories of Depressive Symptoms, Dopamine D2 and D4 Receptors, Family Socioeconomic Status and Social Support in Adolescence and Young Adulthood. Psychiatric Genetics, 19(1), 14-26.

This article examines the joint influence of genetic propensities and social/familial environment on the experience of depressive symptoms among adolescents. Dr. Guang Guo is a colleague in Sociology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Tillman, K. H., & Weiss, U. K.<sup>(d)</sup> (2009). Nativity Status and Depressive Symptoms among Hispanic Young Adults: The Role of Stress Exposure. Social Science Quarterly, 90(5), 1228-1250.

This article documents nativity differentials in depressive symptoms among Hispanics during their initial years of adulthood and explores how ethnicity, socio-demographic characteristics, and exposure to stressful life events and social role changes help to explain those differentials. At the time of publication, Dr. Ursula Keller Weiss was a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University. She is currently a Clinical Data Manager at Mount Sinai Medical Center.

Weiss, U. K.<sup>(d)</sup>, & Tillman, K. H. (2009). Risky Sexual Behaviors Among Hispanic Young Adults in South Florida: Nativity, Age at Immigration and Gender Differences. Perspectives on Sexual and Reproductive Health, 41(4), 202-209.

This paper examines nativity and age-at-immigration differences in the risky sexual behavior of Hispanic young women and men in South Florida. At the time of publication, Dr. Ursula Keller Weiss was a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University. She is currently a Clinical Data Manager at Mount Sinai Medical Center.

Brewster, K. L., & Tillman, K. H. (2008). Who's Doing It? Patterns and Predictors of Youths' Oral Sexual Experiences. Journal of Adolescent Health, 42(1), 73-80.

This article describes patterns of heterosexual oral sexual experience in a nationally representative sample of youth aged 15 to 21 and identifies social and demographic correlates of oral sexual experience among youth who had not engaged in vaginal intercourse. Dr. Karin L. Brewster is a colleague in Sociology at Florida State University.

Keller, U.<sup>(d)</sup>, & Tillman, K. H. (2008). Post-Secondary Educational Attainment of Immigrant and Native Youth. Social Forces, 87(1), 121-152.

This paper examines immigrant generation differences in college attendance and college type (2-yr. vs. 4-yr. colleges) among youth ages 18 through 26 who have graduated from a US. high school, and assesses the importance of family and individual-level factors in explaining these differences. At the time of publication, Dr. Ursula Keller was a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University.

Tillman, K. H. (2008). "Non-Traditional" Siblings and the Academic Outcomes of Adolescents. Social Science Research, 37(1), 88-108.

This paper explores the extent to which residing in "nontraditional" sibling compositions (i.e., living with step- and/or half-siblings) explains the relationship between academic disadvantage and step-family living, and confirms the importance of considering the composition of a young person's entire residential family unit.

Tillman, K. H. (2008). Coresident Sibling Composition and the Academic Ability, Expectations, and Performance of Youth. Sociological Perspectives, 51(4), 679-712.

This study examines the effects of living with "nontraditional" siblings (i.e., step- and/or half-siblings) on the verbal ability scores, grade point averages (GPAs), and college expectations of adolescents, and whether sibling composition effects are moderated by family structure.

Tillman, K. H., & Nam, C. B. (2008). Family Structure Outcomes of Alternative Family Definitions. Population Research and Policy Review, 27(3), 367-384.

This paper assesses the effect of using three different definitions of "family" on the way that demographers measure and analyze key dimensions of contemporary family life. It also discusses implications for our understanding of family structure and family functions in the U.S. and elsewhere, and some policy and programmatic consequences. Dr. Charles Nam is a colleague (Professor Emeritus) in Sociology at Florida State University.

Works in Progress

Brewster, K. L., Tillman, K. H., & Holway, G. V. (2016). Initiation of Oral Sex and Coitus in Emerging Adulthood: Sexual Sequencing in a Recent National Sample.

Manuscript in Preparation. Anticipated submission by end of Spring 2016. This study examines patterns of early sexual experience, as defined by engagement in and ordering of first oral sex and first coitus, by gender, race/ethnicity and age for youths aged 15 to 24. Dr. Karin L. Brewster is a colleague in Sociology at Florida State University. At the time the study was begun, Dr. Giuseppina Valle Holway was a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University. She is now an Assistant Professor of Demography at the University of Texas at San Antonio. After an R&R from Journal of Adolescent Health, the paper was rejected in Fall 2015. We are currently revising it for a new submission.

Tillman, K. H., & Holway, G. V.<sup>(d)</sup> (2016). Immigrant Status and the Family Dynamics of Youth in Two-Biological Parent and Stepfather Families.

Manuscript in preparation. This study examines the relationship between family structure and several key measures of family functioning among adolescents of different immigrant status groups. Dr. Giuseppina Valle Holway, a former graduate student of mine, is currently an Assistant Professor of Demography at the University of Texas at San Antonio.

Tillman, K. H., & Miller, B. (2016). The Bridge Kids: Exploring the Effects of Interracial Romance on Mental Health.

This is a project with my former student and colleague, Dr. Byron Miller (Miami University). It will entail both quantitative and qualitative data collection and is expected to lead to multiple publications. We intend to share equally the lead author role on these publications. To date, we have received IRB approval from both FSU and Miami University (Ohio) for our data collection plans, Dr. Miller has secured two small internal grants from the Miami University to help finance the project, and data collection commenced in Fall 2015. Data collection and cleaning will continue through Spring 2016.

Tillman, K. H., & Miller, B. (2016). The Importance of Childhood Community Contexts for College Attendance among Immigrant and Non-Immigrant Youth.

Manuscript in preparation. This paper documents the characteristics of the communities in which youth of different immigrant generations live and examines the relationship of those characteristics with the likelihood that young people who graduate from a U.S. high school will enroll in college. Dr. Byron Miller, a former graduate student of mine, is currently an Assistant Professor of Sociology at Miami University in Hamilton (Ohio).

Tillman, K. H., & Richard, K.<sup>(d)</sup> (2016). Re-examining Family Boundary Ambiguity Using the Add Health.

Manuscript in preparation. This study examines the conceptualization and measurement of parent-child family boundary ambiguity (FBA), a situation in which family members do not have a clear understanding or agreement about which individuals are included in their family. Mr. Keith Richard is currently a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at Florida State University.
